

PRESS CONTACT:
Pamela Roccabruna
Altec Lansing Technologies, Inc.
570-296-1287
proccabr@alteclansing.com

Altec Lansing® Technologies, Inc. Wins Prestigious CNET Editors' Choice Award

inMotion™ receives Editors' Choice Awards from both CNET and PC Magazine!

SAN FRANCISCO, CA – (June 10, 2004) – Altec Lansing® Technologies, Inc., the leader in the design and manufacture of Powered Audio products, today announced that it received a CNET Editors' Choice award for its inMotion™, the first portable audio system designed expressly for the Apple iPod™. The coveted CNET Editors' Choice award recognizes outstanding personal technology and consumer electronic products that represent the best available choice for quality, performance, design, and service, and its logo is a mark of excellence denoting the best possible investment for technology buyers.

CNET Editors' Choice winners are recognized as top products in their respective technology categories, and contribute to the standard by which all future products are judged. A key selection requirement is the difference it makes in the lives of its users, whether through innovative features, exceptional value for the price, remarkable ease of use, or a demonstrable boost to users' productivity.

The inMotion combines compact design, extra-low battery power consumption, powerful Class D amplification, patented MaxxBass® technology, and a unique, built-in iPod dock, giving iPod owners audio performance they never thought possible from a portable audio system. The inMotion includes a headphone jack for private listening; an auxiliary input jack for connection to other audio devices such as laptops, older iPods, and other MP3 players (3.5mm stereo cable included); and built-in, flush-mounted power and volume controls.

“We are very excited about this honor from CNET as their Editors' Choice award has become the hallmark of technology quality and innovation, and its logo is a symbol consumers know and trust,” said Bob Garthwaite, Altec Lansing® Technologies, Inc. “This is an exceptional achievement and we are very proud to be recognized for our dedication and commitment to producing the highest quality products available today.”

For information on the inMotion and the CNET Editors' Choice award, please visit editorschoice.cnet.com.

About Altec Lansing Technologies, Inc.

Altec Lansing Technologies, Inc., has a rich legacy of blending art and science to stir the soul with high quality consumer and professional speaker systems. The market leader in Powered Audio™ Systems, Altec Lansing designs, manufactures and markets a wide range of computer and home entertainment sound systems and a line of headsets and headphones. The company's Professional division, re-launched in 2002, builds on the storied Altec Lansing name among sound system specifiers, contractors and installers in the fixed installation market. Headquartered in Milford, PA USA and privately held, Altec Lansing has offices in Austin TX, Oklahoma City OK, Luxembourg, and Hong Kong. In addition, Altec Lansing has an ISO 9002 and SA8000 certified manufacturing facility in The People's Republic of China. The company employs about 1,500 people worldwide.

###

Altec Lansing and Voice of the Theatre are registered trademarks, and Powered Audio is a trademark, of Altec Lansing Technologies, Inc. All other trademarks are the property of their respective owners.